Meditation: A Balancing Perspective

A self-determining individual acquires the instinct to plan, expect, desire and demand, with definite decision. Therefore the effort and actions will avail themselves to the purpose. The concentration and focus, produces the niche you deserve. The open markets bare the greats.

Cause and effect; choice and consequence—for life is an evolving environment, adapting to the roles you choose. A person who is self-actualized is mobilized to the serendipity that surrounds. The well attained efforts seem effortless.

A brief word from the Author:

“I’ve attempted to put together glimpses of whatever truth I may find. In doing so I’ve discovered the process of self-critical analysis to be an ongoing measurement to understand evolving self-growth. The seed and roots of Self & Soul is my effort to comprehend and interpret what is.”

—Emerson
“The soul is the perceiver and revealer of truth. We know truth when we see it, let skeptic and scoffer say what they choose.”

*A complex journey
undertaken, day conceived
A maturing evolution growth through experiences and what is believed*

In Search of the Inner Self

The circles of life radiate in all directions. No true center or circumference is found, for sphere upon sphere, inward and outward, reigns infinitely.

The spheres of complexity have a simplistic root. This maxim holds always. The intellect may try in countless ways to prove otherwise, but the great bells of truth have always been ringing and are rung from the same eternal source.

Life is made up each day of circles and spheres. The past is our personal empirical experience. The future holds possible generations. The present is the very essence of reality of what is. The spheres are everywhere all at once.
